

Briceshanay Gresham

I went over on one Saturday and then I just never left. It was fun and invigorating. And it made me feel like, you know, there's a hope and a future for me as a black young child being raised by your aunts and their grandmother. So I just found hope in Ashé at that age, at a very young age. So they basically helped me to become who I am. And they have helped me to grow into areas where I would have never gone had it not been for them. So they like, planted the seeds of hope and then they nurtured me to grow into who I am. So... It's a big deal. It's a real big deal. Throughout my life I couldn't even imagine me without them or them without me like me, mainly me without them, because I'm just one, but you know, I couldn't imagine what or who I would be without them. You know, that's how deeply I feel about Ashé and mainly Mama Carol.
